* # CHAPTER 4 # The Essentials THE ESSENTIALS AFTER APPROPRIATE MASTERING, you'll want to save and share your work in a format that's compatible with most sites. The big three are JPG, GIF, and PNG. The others also work, but they're more specialized formats. This chapter's got all the specifics on how to prepare your images for those situations. ## JPEG JPG stands for Joint Photographic Experts Group, which was a joint committee created by the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) and the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) in the 1990s to create an industry standard image format. The format is the default format of both websites and users. JPG compresses an image and creates an optimized file size so that a Web server, desktop printer, or screen can display it. Despite its huge popularity, the downside of JPG is that it compresses images very efficiently, so if you save a high-resolution photo to JPG, it may be hard to view it on your computer later. The downside of JPG is the color depth. As of this writing, a maximum of 8 bit is the capacity on a computer monitor or screen, so if you're doing the bulk of your work on your computer, the maximum color depth is 256 colors, which isn't sufficient if you're working with a 24-bit or more file. In addition, JPG fails to preserve all of the color information in the original file, so some of the color detail may be lost in the process. JPEG never compresses a color photograph in the same way as it does monochrome images. For instance, a blue sky that's 99 percent of the colors is hard to compress.

The first version of this sentence was incorrect. Q: Why do we call a set on a definition by a definition? I can't understand how do they call it a definition by a definition? And is there a title for this kind of definitions? A: Of course it's a circular definition, but you can say that it is using a definition to specify a definition. It is called circular because the concept 'definition' refers to a definition. 'By' is there because 'Definition' is what the definition 'defines'. So the definition 'defines' the concept 'definition' which refers back to the definition 'defines'. This is a circular definition because it uses a definition (with a circular reasoning) to state a definition.
